Role-playing in groups:

Each group draws a card and discusses role-playing.

Then the role play is played in front of each group.

It is important that everyone speaks appreciatively.

Everyone discusses the role play together after the demonstrations.

There is feedback and ideas on what else could be done differently.

2 roommates do not agree.
They have different ideas.
About the common
household tasks
and how they should be done.

2 friends want to do something
together.
But each person has a different
idea.
They can't agree.

2 Siblings have different opinions.
About how the family should share the car.

2 DigiCoaches have different ideas.
They want to do a project
in class.
They don't agree on exactly how they want to shape the project.

2 friends are arguing.
They jostle
in a waiting queue.

2 people have different opinions how
the home furniture should be designed.

2 friends want to organize
a movie night together.
But they can't agree on a film.

2 friends share the cost
for the shopping.
However, they disagree
on how to divide the costs.
